Poetry.

Only A Word!

A frivolous word, a sharp retort,
A parting in angry haste—
The sun that rose on a bower of bliss,
The loving look, and the tender kiss,
Has set on a barren waste,
Where pilgrims tread with weary feet
Paths destined never more to meet.

A frivolous word, a sharp retort,
An arrow at random sped,
It has cut in twain the mystic tie
That had bound two souls in harmony.
Sweet Love lies bleeding or dead!
A poisoned shaft, with scarce an aim,
Has done a mischief sad as shame.

A frivolous word, a sharp retort,
Alas! for the loves and lives
So little a cause has rent apart;
Tearing the fondest heart from heart
As a whirlwhind rends and rives,
Never to remite again,
But live and die in secret pain.

A frivolous word, a sharp retort,
Alas! that it should be so!
Have wrought more evil, and done more wroag,
Have brought to the world more woe,
Than all the armies age to age.
Records on history's blood-strained page.

Selected Story.

John's Little Woman.

BY AUGUSTUS LARNED

"It's a risky business. A man has got to take big chances." John cleared his throat discreetly, as if he might be saying too much; "and then there is the little woman at home. If anything should happen to me, it would be all day with her. The road don't seem to me as it used to; and I mean to get away from it, and turn farmer."

"Dunno," put in old Sam, the signal man, shifting his quid of tobacco from side to side of his leathern cheeks. "It's easy talking. Words don't count mor'n wind. But there's something another that holds folks to their places in this world, habit as much as anything; and for my part, I expect to live and die on the road."

"Die on the road!" There was something in the phrase ill suited to John's state of mind. He was not prepared to die yet a while.—Life looked very warm and bright in his eyes, with the smiling face of his little woman filling the vista.

"Come over to 'The Vine' with us, and take a nip, John," called out one of a group of hands off hours, like himself who were washing away the grim and soot of a coal train, in a little back office of the freight house.

"Not to-night," replied John, hardly pausing in his long stride; "and you'd better keep clear of the 'Vine'. Men of our trade havn't any business to muddle their brains."

"Get along with your preaching!" called out a rough fellow, liberally smerred with coal-oil.—"Everybody knows Merivale is a Methody; and that his wife has him tied up to her apron-string.—Come Dilke hand over the polisher," alluding to a not very immaculate wash towel. "I'll be goldarned if I'd have such a wife. I hate interfering women."

These remarks were quite lost on the subject of them. He had set himself toward home with a steady square swing, such as he used in all his undertakings. It was easy to see by John Merivale's motion that he need not be admonished to do what he did with his might. He had the grimy overalls on yet, which the little woman washed and patched every week of her life. Let the fellows without a home to come to, he thought, scrub up in the old freight house. And something warm and unspeakable, welled up in his big bosom at the consciousness of his great good fortune. His hair and whiskers were full of cinders and grit; but Nannie had seen him in his dis guise more than once before.

Out past the freight-house, along net-work of side-tracks and long string of empty cars, into the mean part of a large town, that did the mean work for its more respectable neighbors, and took the bad odors and the garbage. Skirting this, John came to a more open space, where the small houses of mechanics stood, with a handbreadth of garden about them.

There was one little brown dot of a house, under the wing of a great cherry tree, that looked as if it was trying to hide the tiny thing behind its giant trunk, to keep the world from any knowledge of the pretty nest concealed there. Just then a face appeared in the window of the little house, where a Virginia creeper would make a dainty framework of flickering leaves by and by, though as yet the spring was chary of its green. Above it hung a canary bird's cage of red and white wires, and there was a bit of muslin curtain tied back with blue ribbons.

The face was round and dimpled, with a smooth even tint, neither dark nor light. The lips were full and red, and the brown eyes very shy of direct glances. Over the low, broad forehead the soft, glossy hair was brushed smoothly, except where it broke into rings and impromptu curls about the temples. This was John's little woman.

At the moment John turned the street-corner the canary-bird fluttered its golden wings and broke into a rapture of singing; and the face disappeared, and appeared again in the little porch like a flash of sunshine. There was an embrace; and Nancy's smooth linen collar got rumpled when her face suffered a total eclipse in John's beard. But next moment she was holding him by the arm, and looking up, with her eyes limpid and moist, at the though that she had her big fellow back again safe and sound.

They were in the kitchen and living room now. John thought there was not another place like it for neatness in the world. The house had just two rooms on the ground floor, and one of them was the sleeping apatment. Beyond extended a tiny shed, and through the open door you caught a glimpse of well-scrub bed boards, a braided mat, and cleanly washed pails and tubs. Everything about Nancy's little domicil bore some specialmark of grace. Even the polished covers of the cook-stove, the shining tins, and holders raged upon their hooks, were, in a homely way, beautiful; and the carpeted space by the sunny windows, where the bird hung, with its work-table, and framed photographs, and bunch of life-everlasting, and dried grasses on a bracket, and a great pile of snowy stuff that Nancy was converting into shirts for John, with the patch-work of the foot-stool, and the little woman's sewing-chair where the red light of the spring sunset stole in, was a dear, familiar picture of humble home-life.

The kettle was bubbling on the fire, the tea was steeping odorously and the supper-table stood ready set, with covered dishes on the hearth, emitting fragrant smell. It was after John had washed and combed, and they were seated, with the veal cutlet and the mashed potatoes between them, flanked by one of Nancy's apple pies and a glass dish of clear quince jelly, that John noticed the little woman had something on her mind. There was a preceptible flutter about Nancy, which made her lids droop and the breath come quick when John looked at her with his keen gray eyes. He was so comfortable however, to have her there right before him, where he could touch her if he chose, that in the very excess of his contentment he kept still for a while.

"Did you have a good run down?" Nancy inquired, as she poured a cup of tea, with a little tremor shaking her hand.

"Pretty fairish," replied John, putting in a large mouthful of potata; only we came near having a smash-up at Brighton."

"Oh! John, how did it happen?"

"There was a broken rail. We don't often stop at the station to coal; but we happened to yesterday, and it was all that saved us from kingdom come." This time he put in a mouthful of extra size.

"How can you be so cool, John? it makes me shiver to hear you talk."

"It's easy enough to be cool, Mannie, sitting here with you. Every body on the line knows we are bound to have just so many accidents a year. It's a thing that can be ciphered on. Yesterday I saw a poor fellow lying stretched on a truck, with both legs cut clean off below the knees. It was his own carelessness. He tried to jump on after the train had got under way. It turned me sick and giddy. Sometimes lately, I've been thinking that I'm hardly fit for this business. The thought of you here, little woman, makes me squeamish. I never used to know that I had a nerve in my boby; but now nights, when I drive the up-train through the dark, I get to feeling your arms around my neck, and a deuced queer feeling it is too. Men who have more than one life depending on theirs have no right to go into dangerous service."

The little woman flushed, then paled suddenly at John's last words. "You must get out of it John. There's more reason now!" And then she stopped and laid down her knife and fork, and the canary-bird began to sing, as if he had just waked up and was repeating his dreams in music.

"That is just what has been bothering me a sight lately. You see I used to have the reputation of being a cool, steady hand. But I shall make a mess of it one of these days; I know I shall. It don't do to be forever thinking of home and dreading danger, and setting a big price on your life. What's your notion about a farm out West, Nannie? Don't you think you would be as happy as a queen among the pigs and chickens?"

"I've always longed for it, John; for then I could have you with me all the time, and I should get rid of the old dread that I feel like a load right here," laying her hand upon her bosom.

"Courage, little woman? We'll fetch it before the year is out. Then I shall have enough saved to start on somewhere. I wouldn't mind if it was far away on the border; for, big fellow as I am, I don't think I should be as much afraid of wild Injuns as I am getting to be of the road. So, if nothing happens before another spring comes round, we will be living in our own shanty."

John had finished his supper and shoved away from the table, and was sitting now tilted back in his chair against the wall, with his pipe in his hand. He leaned forward and took a long look at her. Then he said, very low: "Come here, Nannie."

"Not now, John. Let me clear away the things and wash the dishes; and then we will have a long talk."

There was not much more said until the little woman had tidied the room. John sat in the same place breathing out thin blue wreaths of smoke, that rose and curled above his head. The moonlight began to shine through the muslin curtains, and lay in still, bright squares upon the floor. At last John reached up to take down a lamp from the shelf.

"Don't," said Nancy, coming to him now. "Let us sit a while in the moonlight." And she toyed with the fingers of his big hand, and got her arm around his neck, and pressed her two palms softly over his eyes, and the secret was told.

John sat still, and held her close to him. Something profoundly good and sweet welled up in his bosom, and would not let him speak. It seemed as though the angels must be looking at them there in the hush of the moonlight. He was glad the lamp had not ben lit. For big, womanish tears rushed to his eyes; and a solemn, tender, religious feelings came over him, such as he had never before experienced.

They sat in the moonlight, with hands clasped, until the fire went out of John's pipe; and he said, at last, breaking the delicious silence:

"The new prospect, little woman, puts me out with the road more than ever. A man hasn't any business to be rash when there are them depending on him who are nearer than his life."

Next morning John was up before dawn; and the little woman was up, too, busying herself with his breakfast. There was a shadow on her face. And at last she came out of the cloud by the stove, where the steak was broiling and the coffee streaming, and said: "John, I had mother's warning last night."

What's that?" inquired John, rather sharply, turning round from where he was doing up his bundle. "Past midnight I woke with a start, and something seemed to go by me in the dark. Mother used to say that it was a sure sign of danger ahead."

"Fudge!" returned John, snapishly. "Your mother is an old gran—I mean old women are full of signs and wonders. Don't go filling your head with such notions every time you happen to have a nightmare."

"Never mind," said Nancy, waiving the subject, in a tone which exasperated John more still; for he was certain she put faith in the warning, and would brood upon it after he got away.

"I want to go to the station with, you" she added quietly. "I can stay in the waiting room by Mrs. Crockett until it is broad daylight; and you will have a few minutes for me after the train is made up."

John had no objections to offer; and the little woman put on her water-proof cloak and drew the hood over her head. The Stars were still shining as they locked the door behind them; and the moon, solitary and resplendent, hung low in the sky.

"Let us go by the river, John. There is time enough, and I always like that early best of the morning. John liked it, too. He was not possessed of a very powerful imagination; but the mysterious blackness of the river, with its scattered lights quenched like falling stars, had for him a certain kind of fascination. They were not quite so comfortable as they had been the night before. John thought Nannie's foolish megrims had got into his head; but he wasn't going to show it—not he. So he whistled cheerily, and tucked the little woman closer under his arm.

The moon had gone down now. It has the darkest hour before dawn. Suddenly as they were nearing the railroad bridge, John stopped and clutched his wife by the shoulder. "Look ahead there, Nannie. My God! the draw is open, and no signal shown for the four forty train due here in five minutes!" the words fairly hissed through his teeth.

"Oh John!" gasped the little woman, as the awful danger flashed across her, "it's the night express, isn't it, with all the sleeping people on board? Can't we save them? Oh, we must! What is that lying up there on the track?" "Old Sam, the flagman, dead drunk, I swear! "Them scoundrels," using an adjective not common to his lips, "enticed him in the 'Vine.' I must drag the poor wretch off the track. For God's sake, Nannie, look round and see if you can find his lantern and signal flag. He most likely dropped them hereabouts."

Nancy scrambled up the embankment, hardly knowing how. "I've got the lantern, John," she said, in a kind of quick pant.

"Are there matches?" John asked, rolling the lumpish heap over by his great strength.

"No, no."

"Wait, here are some in Sam's vest-pocket," he said, fumbling away in the dark, while the old fellow gave a sound between a grunt and a snore."

"Steady now, little woman, steady. Draw it across the rail. The lives of a hundred human beings hang on a spark. He spoke coolly; but Nancy knew how terrible the excitement was within.

"Oh, John, they won't go! They are damp."

"Take another."

She took three.

"This is the last," she said.

A sick, faint feeling came over her. The monster train could be heard thundering far off on the track. "God have pity on them!" she murmured, with ashen lips.

The fourth match struck fire. A fizz, and faint blue smoke told the story. The lantern was lit. And John seized it and dashed wildly up the road waving it aloft like a mad will-o'-the wisp. There was still time to save the great express train. It slackened speed; halted; then backed, with many screams from the engine, as it balked of its prey, with disaster into the river, while the unconscious sleepers in the close cars little dreamed of the terrible danger they had escaped.

"You are coming round all right, ain't you, little woman?" said John, anxiously, dashing some water in Nancy's face who did not rightly know what had happened.

"Oh yes; God be praised!" and she looked up with great tears in her eyes. "You never will speak against mother's warning again; will you John?"

In twenty minutes time John was driving his own train through the dim, pearl-colored dawn. He could not keep the thought of those sleeping people so near the brink out of his mind. Death and eternity had brushed by him; and it made his hands shake and the big beads of prespiration start out on his forehead. As he looked ahead, with his eye on the alert the long lines of track appeared to wiggle and wirthe away like black serpants; and he grew almost afraid to touch the machinery with which he was so familiar. Before reaching the great terminus of the road, John had made up his mind what to do. So he turned diecetly into the company's office, and in five minutes' time had been asked to walk up to the directors room.

"Good morning, Mr. Merivale," said the gentlemanly official on duty advancing with considerable show of warmpth and emotion. "Sit down, sir; sit down. The wires have just brought news of the inexpressible disaster from which your vigitance this morning saved us. The loss of life would have been to horrible to contemplate; but I can tell you in confidence, Merivale, that it would have been a death blow to the company. That old wretch of a signal-man must be made an example of. We mean to weed drunkenness off the line."

"It will be a mighty hard job, sir; and I wouldn't be too severe on old Sam. The other fellows enticed him into the rum-shop, although they knew his weakness; and, as for my share of the work, it was no great matter. The little woman helped me, or it never could have been done."

"Who is the little woman?" the director inquired, with deep interest."

John told his story in strong, plain, homely words; and then the high official said:

"Well Merivale, you are just the man we want to tie to us—a man of principle, sober and vigilant. We are ready to raise your salary and advance you in any and every way."

"That is just what I am here for, sir," said John, fidgeting on his chair. "I'm come to tender my resignation. You have got a mistaken notion of me. I feel that I am not fit for the work."

"Not fit for the work!" repeated the director in an astonished tone.

"No, sir. I don't drink; but there's other things besides liquor that unsteadies a man. He has no business to take great risks if others are depending on him.

"Have you a large family, Mr. Merivale?"

"No, sir. There is only the little woman and me."

"No children, then?"

"Not yet, sir; but——"

"Oh, I understand. Still you are determined to quiet?"

"Quite determined, sir You see I have got afraid of the road, and I can't do my duty like a man."

"Well I am sorry, very sorry to loss you. But wait a bit, Merivale. Here is a piece of paper for the little woman."

When John got into the street again he unfolded the paper. It was a check on the——Bank for two hundred dollars. —Independent

The Diseases of Eastern North Carolina Compared with other Sections.

BY A PHYSICIAN OF BALTIMORE MD.

To the Editor of the North Carolinian:

I regret that this season is witnessing an unusual prevalance of malarial diseases in Elizabeth City and surrounding country. It is calculated to discourage those recently settled among you, who will be inclined to take their first years experience, as indicating what they may expect in the future.

It would be well for these before giving way to discouragement, to enquire, what has been the experience of other localities in respect to health, for it is by comparison alone that we can arrive at any just conclusion as to the healthfulness of any given place; and if on inquiry we find that many other places, widely separated, have been visited this season, by an extraordinary amount of sickness and extraordinary mortality, the conclusion is inevitable, that the fault is of the season and not of the locality. To begin then with my own City—Baltimore, is the healthiest city in the world, with a single exception—and yet here, the past season has presented an array of sickness and of mortality, which is not only extraordinary, but at one time became appalling—the mortality among children alone, reached in one week to over 150, and among children and adults to very nearly 300—while for other seasons the average number of deaths per week has been about 130, including all classes.

Malarial diseases have prevailed very extensively, invading every portion of the city, even the most elevated where heretofore they have been unknown—indeed almost every case of disease of whatever form, has presented evidences of malarial complication. In some parts of the city, nearly every member of every family has suffered from these fevers. In numerous instances, congestion, either during the chill or the fever, have presented alarming symptoms and sometimes have proved fatal. Nor has this endemic been confined to the city. It has pervaded the whole adjoining country for miles around, as far as my observation has extended.

I have similar reports from very many other places North and West.—Philadelphia, New-York, Boston, Cincinnati, are reported to have suffered greatly. While some of the smaller interior towns of Pennsylvania, New-Jersey, and New-York, as Carlisle, Williamsport, Flushing, Elmira and Trenton, the disease has been especially severe. As our citizens return from their summer tours, in search of health or pleasure, many of them bring back souvenirs, in the shape of Intermittent and Bilious fevers. I am called almost daily to such cases, imported from the different popular springs and shores—cases as obstinate and severe as I have ever met with in Eastern Carolina.

Admitting then, as we are compelled to do, the wide-spread prevalence of this class of diseases, during the past season, we must look to their causes not in peculiarities of place, but of season.

What then have been the characteristics of the past season? The most obvious has been intense heat, prevailing for a great length of time, through a large extent of country.

The intensity of the heat has been less with you than it has been either in Baltimore, Philadelphia or New-York. I have verified this, by repeated comparisons of the reports of the Thermometer on the same day, in the different places, and this will be found to be the rule and not the exception.

Another trait of the season has been the small amount of rain that has fallen during this heated term—and the large amount that fell just previous to it. The heated term then, found the ponds and rivers full, and the ground thoroughly saturated with water. In some localities the fall of water was so great as to postpone the planting of crops, and in many places, it materially interfered with early cultivation.

After the hot weather set in, the scarcity of rain in some places, amounted to extreme drouth, but very generally, there have been frequent small showers, sufficient to ensure heavy crops, and a large growth of vegetation, but not sufficient to saturate the soil to any great depth, so the underground water-level has been constantly sinking, while the surface soil has been often wet and dried.

The paved streets of our cities, receiving and absorbing the direct and reflected rays of the sun, become so super-heated, as to vaporize the rain almost as fast as it fell, so that the air was rendered heavier, closer and hotter after each shower.

To a very great, but less extent, this was the case in the country as well as in the city.

These peculiarities of the season then, have been exactly those which produce a maximum of evaporation—for not only, has the usual earth-surface been constantly thus acted upon, but owing to the receding water level, increasing areas of pond and swamp-bottoms and river margins, have been presented to the direct rays of the sun. This ensuring the largest possible evolution of miasma, malaria or whatever other name the unknown, subtle fever-poison may be called.

Notwithstanding the vast amount of research and observation, embodied in the many books written on the subject of this poison, its essence remains absolutely unknown and seemingly undiscoverable.

It presents itsself to us, in the hideous shape of disease in the perverted course of physical and mental operations—but beyond this, the most refined researches of chemistry fail to give us any knowledge, just as they fail to detect exquisite perfumes, which are known to us only through a single sense. But however little we may know of the essence of malaria, we do know that its progeny of diseases abound most pleanteously in just such a season as that which is now passing away, and wherever such a season may befal, whether Elizabeth City, New-York or the North Pole, periodic diseases cannot fail to "brood and thicken" if man be there to afford a nestling place.

The past season, confirms previous observation that the fatality of Bilious fevers is much greater North than South. The papers in Northern Cities, report numerous cases of deaths by Intermittent and Remittent fevers, while I cannot recall a single fatal case, although I have examined carefully with that view, every number of the accurate papers, and I do not hesitate to assert, that in proportion to the population, which that paper represents, the smallness of its mortuary report, scarcely admits of a parallel.

The truth is that malarial diseases, as they exist in your country, are not fatal. of all febrile diseases, this group is the most enienable to treatment and in consequence, presents the least array of deaths.

The fact is notorious, that very many Of your citizens cure themselves, by the use of domestic remedies, or patent nostrums, without the aid of a physician.

The healthfullness of North Carolina is generally very much underrated, or perhaps it would be better to say, that great ignorance prevails in regard to it.

The last census showed conclusively that in proportion to population, the mortality in that State, for a series of years, is less than in any other State in the Union. Causes now in operation, must in a few years, greatly reduce the amount of your non-fatal diseases.

The opening of Nag's Head Inlet and consequently, the introduction of Salt Water and Salt Air to your doors—thorough drainage and thorough cultivation, grass and clover to protect fields not in grain, a better system of building and warming. Steam Mills in place of mill ponds, more fruit and vegetables and less bacon, more rich milk and cream, and less stimulants, a vastly greater productiveness of soil, and consequently less effort and exposure—a greater variety of agricultural products, improved implements and labor saving machinery—rich grasses instead of corn fodder—requiring the pleasant labor of a few days, instead of the sweltering fe

THE EFFECTS OF THE WAR IN EUROPE.

It is the common opinion that the war between France and Prussia will increase the price of grain, and depress cotton. If it was certain the war would continue for any considerable length of time, such would be immediately the case. But capstalists see reasons for beleiving that the contest will soon end, and they make their calculations and couduct their speculations accordingly. When the news seems favorable to peace there is a rise in cotton and a fall in breadstuffs. This will continue until something definate and tangible transpires, upon which safe calculations may be made. Should England become involved the price of cotton would immediately fall to a low figure. It is the fear of this that now keeps the price of cotton down. No one can tell at present, what is most likely to be the turn of affairs. But a few weeks, or even days, may show enough to settle prices one way or the other.

It seems most likely that the Prince Imperial will be put forward by Prussia for the throne of France. Should peace be made on such terms the other nations would probably be satisfied, and the prospect for a long peace in Europe assured. This, or any other settlement upon a bases seemingly solid and permanent, would enhance the price of cotton and decreas that of grain. While the continuance of the war and further complications would have the reverse effect.

But one thing bearing upon the agricultural interests of this section of country is already settled, upon which safe calculations may be made for another year. The seeding of wheat in France and Germany has been prevented to a great extent by the military operations. It is now too late to remedy this. There will be a scarcity of wheat, next year in Europe. It would seem, therefore, good policy for our farmers to sow large wheat crops, this Fall. Should the war continue the price of wheat must be high, next summer. Should the war end, there will still necessarily be a scarcity and good prices must be obtained. Ordinarially, it is good policy for farmers to plant their crops without much regard to speculative opinions as to prices. But in this case, a certain event has taken place that must necessarily affect the price of the next crop of wheat.

We throw out these suggestions for the consideration of our farmers.

POLITICAL CAPITAL.

The Democratic party is sorely in need of political capital. The economical conduct of public affairs by the Republican Administration shuts off the old cry of "radical mismanagement and plunder" so freely used in by-gone days. The leaders of the opposition are too wise to make false representations to the people on this subject, as the masses are sufficiently well educated to inquire into matters for themselves and to receive no person's word as gospel. Figures are stubborn things, and it is generally accepted that they won't lie. Hence, if our Democratic friends direct attention into the conduct of the finances and the people look into the matter and discover how honestly and faithfully the revenues have been collected, how rapidly the public debt has been discharged and how taxation has been reduced, all through a Republican administration of affairs, they will be sure to arrive at the conclusion to leave well enough alone, and to keep in place those officials who are doing their duty in such an admirable and satisfactory manner. Failing to make capital in this direction, the leaders of the opposition sought to seize upon the Chinese question and use it to secure the support of the working classes. Their demagogism is so clearly apparent in this that they can expect to make little or no headway. If the awful record that party has made in past by its adherency to slavery and opposition to the best interests of white labor, could be forgotten, then they might hope to find place in the confidence of the toiling masses. The Republican party has assumed a proper position on the Chinese question, and one which cannot fail to secure the endorsement of all the people. Although friendly to voluntary immigration come from whatever quarter of the globe people may, the party at the same time loudly condemns the importation of foreigners by those who would hold them in semi-slavery for a period of time and bring their cheap labor in competition with that of our working classes. The Republican party owes its strength and power to the principles of Freedom and Equality ever maintained and battled for, and at this late date will not go backwards and favor the re-establishment of slavery in any shape or form. The Democracy understand this; the people know it. It is therefore idle for the opposition journalists to attempt to make capital out of the Chinese question. It will not prove of advantage to them, but to their disadvantage, for it will awaken the masses to that sober thought and reflection which must lead to a stronger love and closer adherence to the old Republican party that has from the hour of its birth, under cloud and in sunshine, nobly stood by the helpless, strengthened the weak, lifted out of bondage millions of human beings held in chains and made them full citizens in a land of liberty and equality not only by name but in reality.

The Legislature meets at Raleigh on the third Monday in November. As the Democracy have control of that body they will be responsible for the legislation of the next two years. The NORTH CAROLINIAN will keep its readers posted.

STICK TO ONE THING.

We would impress upon the minds of young readers, and especially our young men, the importance of the four words heading this article. "Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel," is the language of the Bible. Whoever expects to succeed in any undertaking, must enter into it with a hearty and earnest will to do his best. When a trade or profession is chosen, obstacles, be they large or small, must not be allowed to stand in the way of mastering that trade or profession. However much we may deprecate the old time custom of indenturing apprentices, the system, in its practical results, operated most always for the lasting good of the apprentice. Generally, it insured him a good trade and a wholesome discipline that fitted him for success in business. At the present time, very many young men undertake to acquire a trade, and after a brief trial, abandon it, because there are unpleasant duties to be performed and obstacles to be overcome. They consider themselves accountable to no one, and go and come at the bidding of caprice, or an uneasy, unsettled mind. The result of this is to send out into the world young men who have not half learned their trades, of unstable character, who drift from post to pillar, and who succeed in nothing but strolling along the high ways of life, melancholly wrecks of men.

Our advice to every young man is, after having chosen his vocation to stick to it. Don't leave it because hard blows are to be struck or disagreeable work performed. The men who have worked their way up to wealth and usefulness do not belong to the shiftless and unstable class, but may be reckoned among those who took off their coats, rolled up their sleeves, conquored their prejudices against labor, and manfully bore "the heat and burden of the day." Whether upon the old worn-out farm, where the fathers toiled, diligently striving to bring back the soil to productivenees; in the machine-shop or factory, or in the thousand other business places that invite honest toil and skill, let the motto be STICK TO IT. It will come right in the end.

THE OCTOBER ELECTIONS.

The October elections resulted more favorably than we expected. In an editorial published a few weeks ago our readers remember that we calculated upon greater losses than have occurred. The Administration has been signally and emphatically endorsed. In Nebraska the Republicans have increased their usual majority, and secured the single member of Congress to which the State is entitled. In Iowa we have elected all our Congressmen and carried the State overwhelmingly. In Ohio the Republican State ticket is elected by a large majority. The Congressional delegation will stand the same number as at present. If Gen. SCHENCK contests the election of CAMPBELL, as it is said he will and successfully, there will be a Republican gain of one. Pennsylvania remains the "Keystone State"—true to the Union. The Democrats only made a gain of five, and in three of these the aggregate majority does not reach a hundred. Those Districts will be contested. The District of Judge WOODWARD—the Democratic strong hold—has been carried by the Republicans, a Republican gain. Indiana, always a close State, has been carried by the Democrats, but the Congressional delegation aemains the same excepting one district n which it is reported a Democrat is elected. Thus it will be seen that the next Congress will remain decisively Republican, all of which is satisfactory.

THE PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION.

The proclamation of the President issued October 12, 1870, is a plain and emphatic warning, which it will be well for the people of the United States to heed. There is more than merely words in the sentence that states that all persons will be vigorously prosecuted for any violation thereof, and upon conviction and sentence to punishment, will not be entitled to expect or receive clemency of the Executive, to save them from the consequences of their guilt. The proclamation forbids accepting or exercising commissions against persons with whom we are at peace; to enlist themselves or others against such persons; to fit out or arm vessels to commit hostilities, or to deliver commissions within the jurisdiction of the United States for such vessels with the intent that they may be employed in that way. This is strictly carrying out the doctrine of neutrality.

The North Carolinian has earned an enviable reputation for moderation and firmness, and is known to be a dignified journal—fit to adorn every household in the State.—Raleigh Standard.

Such has been our aim, as we believe it should be the aim of every public journalist. The editor is an educator. His influence is incalculable. If he prostitutes his position by dealing with slanders, inventing scandal, violating every principle of sanctity and honor, and appealing to the lowest passions of mankind by becoming their minister, he not only becomes a moral leper but he makes the press an engine of unmitigated evil. Alas! that the profession is cursed with such members—men who do not hesitate to violate all the decencies and moralities of civilized society. But, thank God, the world moves, North Carolina is growing. We are beginning to have schools; our people are advancing in taste, in appreciation, and courtesy, and with them comes an increasing demand for high-toned, respectable journalism—that which prizes virtue, guards reputation, defends character, and protects the social harmony and domestic peace of society.

Will the Democratic leaders ever learn wisdom? If not before, ought not the recent elections show them the extreme folly of their present course? They have persisted in errors which the common sense of the whole country has condemned. They would reverse all the work of national legislation, and undo the real progress upon which the Government and Congress have been engaged. The people have decided that they cannot and will not tolerate this. Will the Democracy heed the voice of the people?

THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAIL ROAD.

For many years the project of a Southern Pacific rail road has been entertained by capitalists. Owing to misadventures, divided councils and legislative coldness, the scheme never culminated until last winter, when national aid was procured and the State of Texas agreed to set apart a portion of her public lands for rail road purposes. During September those interested in the road met in New-York and organized a company with Gen. FREMONT as President, under the name of the "Trans-continental Rail road Company." The work will go forward to speedy completion.

Another expedition is about to start out under the auspicies of the U. S. Government for the survey of a new Canal route across the narrow part of Central America. The route now belived to be available is that known as the Tehuantepec and Nicaranga. Thirty thousand dollars have been set apart for its survey, and the expedition will be under the command of Capt. SHUFELDT of the Navy.

A very distinct shock of an earthquake occurred on the 20th, passing from Ohio through New-York, Lower Canada and New-England to the Coast. It caused great consternation in New-York and other cities. It took place a few minutes past 11 o'clock, and lasted from half a minute to two minutes.

We regret to learn of the continued illness of Chief Justice CHASE. It is said that his indisposition is so serious as to prevent his presiding at the opening of the Supreme Court on the 30th inst.

The current issue of Lippincott's Magazine contains an unusual variety of timely articles. The opening paper, entitled "Crackers," gives a lively sketch of the character and condition of the poorer classes of the white population of the South prior to the war. It contains much information that will be entirely new to a large number of readers. "A Polyglot Empire," by the author of "Prussia the German Nation," is a description of the constituent elements of the Austrian monarchy, and will be perused with profit by those who are interested in the doctrine of the nationality of races. "The Calvert Family," is an historical sketch of the founder of the Commonwealth of Maryland and his immediate connections. "The Stone Annals of the Past" is an article intended to explain in a popular manner the most striking features of one of the great transitional epochs of history.

Fiction is well represented in this number of Lippincott's. Anthony Trollope's new novel, "Sir Harry Hotspur of Humblethwaite," is continued, and a variety of shorter stories are furnished by less distinguished, though able, pens. There are also two poems in this number, one by Howard Glyndon bearing the pleasing title of "Violets in Autumn." The Gossip exhibits its usual characteristics, and serves as a pleasant conclusion to so much agreeable matter.

Foreign War News.

From the papers of the 18th we learn that heavy reinforcements for the army before Paris reach there every day. A London dispatch says that the first shots of the Prussian bombarment of Paris were fired on Friday, the 14th inst. Advices from the French capital by balloon report that a battle was fought outside the walls on Saturday last in which 3,000 Prussians were killed. The Moniteur is disappointed that no affort is made to cut Prussian communications. Their army at Paris might thus be compelled to withdraw. A decree issued by the Paris Government extends the time for paying commercial bills to Nov. 14. The Berlin papers condemn the bombardment of St. Cloud as an act of vandalism. One of the bombs from Mont de Valerien is said to have burst in the bedroom of Napoleon I, destroying the famous mirrors. Four thousand French soldiers surrendered at Soissons, and 132 cannon were among the spoils of the victors. The Prussian force relensed by the surrender is said to number 22,000 men. It will move against some others of the northern fortified places. A Berlin dispatch says Marshal Bazaine has made overtures to capitulate, and a Brussels dispatch repeats the report that an officer has been sent by him to the German head-quarters to make terms. The report that negotiations for peace on the basis of the cession of Alsace and Luxembourg, is believed in Brussels. Cannonading in the direction of Thionville and Metz is again reported, and the former city is said to have been reinforced. Bourbaki has gone to Lille to organize his new command in the north of France, Siege-guns are to be used against New-Briesach. The Prussians have evacuated Beaugency, on the Loire, between Orleans and Tours, blowing up the railway viaduct before leaving. A movement toward forming a southern confederation in France, with Marseilles for the capital, is denounced by the Constitutionnel of Tours. The local authorities of France complain of difficulty in preserving order. The movements of the French fleet create apprehension on the German coast, and the lights and buoys have been removed from the mouth of the Elbe, and obstructions restored. The French fleet is accompanied by flat-bottomed boats. The Hamburg-American steamer Thuringen was pursued on leaving Greenock, Scotland, recently, and in making her escape, ran down a collier, sinking it at once. Russia rejected M. Thiers' project for a Congress of the Great Powers, unless the treaty of 1856 should be revised by the same body.

From the papers of the 19th we learn that dispatches from Tours, show that the German advance is within about twenty miles of Tours. The French Government has become reticent as to the movements of its forces, for fear of giving information to the enemy. The Prussians still occupy Orleans, where there are 3,000 French and German wounded soldiers, to whose aid the Anglo-American Ambulance Corps has gone from Versailles. Hamburg and Bremen are threatened by the French fleet, and consequently much agitated. The Prussians entered Mont Didier, in the Forth, recently, captured 150 Gardes Mobile, and levied a contribution of $10,000, taking the Mayor and a banker as hostages. A Lill dispatch says that large Prussian forces have arrived in the Northern Departments. The Prussians have captured Vesous, in the Department of Haute Soane. Gambetta has gone to the Vosges, to organize an army to oppose the Prussian advance on Lyons. The people of Strasbourg are represented in Berlin dispatches to be satisfied with the new order of things.

From the papers of the 20th we see that M. Favre has published in the Journal Official "an answer to Count Bismarck's" explanation" of their negotiations, which he says the ambition of Prussia does not stop with the conquest of two provinces, but with the destruction of France. She was offered dishonor and she refused. Even vanquished, she will be greater in her misfortune, and will have the admiration and sympathy of the world. A Belgian jouanal says Trochu and other members of the Provisional Government favor peace, but Gambetta opposes it. The French War Office has issued a circular to neutrals denying the responsibility for the present war, and asserting that France desires a durable peace. The Paris Journal Official says Gen. Burnside had no mission from the Prussian authorities when he visited Paris, and describes him as an officious agent.

French troops are assembling at Besancon, probably to oppose the advance on Lyons. A delegation left Lyons on Wednesday to solicit the presence of Minister Gambetta there. A pacific demonstration in favor of the restoration of M. Esquiros as Administrator of the Department from which he was removed for suppressing a newspaper opposed to the Government, was made on the 19th inst. at Marseilles. No disorder followed. Troops and war material have been collected at Toulon from the surrounding country and sent to the front.

Americans who had secured passes from the Prussian authorities to leave Paris were told that for certain strategical reasons they could not leave by the usual roads, but by going down the Seine by boat they would be protected. Mr. Washburne says he will remain as long as the French authorities remain.

From the papers of the 21st we see that the Tours journals publish accounts of the harsh treatment of the inhabitants of Orleans by the Germans after the capture. Enormous requisitions were enforced, and the soldiers eat and drank greedily and wasted what they could not eat. Bishop Dufanpoup ineffectually endeavored to intercede with the commander of the invaders. The houses of the wealthier citizens, where soldiers were billetted, were sacked, and in some instances the owners shot. The Prussian force is estimated at 95,000. Rumors of the withdrawal of the Prussians toward Paris are current, and still others that they are opposed to the French Army south of the Loire. One dispatch of yesterday, from London, states that another battle has been fought at Orleans, in which the Germans defeated the French and recaptured the city. (?) Tours dispatches report troops from the south of France passing through that city to join the army near Orleans. Official advices from Vendome announce the capture of Chateaudun by the Germans, on the 18th inst., after a siege, which began at noon and ended at 10. P. M. Successful sorties are restored to have been made by the garrison of New-Briesach.

The Parisians give as the reason for shelling St. Cloud that they desire to show the Prussians that no sacrifice shall be shunned in defending the city. The Prussians luxuriate in the elegant villas of the suburbs of Paris, according to the Cologne Gazette stabling their horses in libaries feed the kitchen fires with rich carvings from the houses and orange-trees from the conservatories. Fruits and vegetables are abundant, and other supplies are brought from Normandy, Orleans and Germany. The women of Paris are forming organizations to aid the defenders. The German account of the sortie of the 14th is that the French were repulsed, while the French say the Germans asked a truce to bury their dead. Within the city great care is taken to economize the supply of food. The cattle and sheep are sheltered, and horses are killed and their flesh salted. The fortresses still keep up a steady fire. Americans in Paris will be allowed permission to leave the city at the request of the United States Minister.

A meeting of delegates from fourteen of the western Departments of France was recently held, at which seventy were present, and a resolution to recognize the authority of the Government of Paris and Tours was adopted by sixty-six to four. A dispatch received by Baron Gerolt, the North German Minister in Washington, from Count Bismarck at Versailles, says the object of the millitary operations in France is to secure such a new boundary as will secure Germany against future French invasions. No feeling of hostility to France is felt.

From the papers of the 22nd we learn that the Prussians are reported to have evacuated Meaug and Beaugency. Contradictory statements are made as to their movements but at Tours the impression prevails that they are going in that direction. A force of Prusians advancing on Amiens have returned to Breteuil. A Rouen dispatch says Gen. Bourbaki passed through there yesterday on his way to Lille. The Prussians were forced to retire from Stenay by a sortie from Montmedy. A Berlen telegram says that at Verdun as at Paris the besieged are squandering their ammunition. A violent storm passed over Paris on the 20th inst. The French are shelling Meudon. The Papal Nuncio and the Colombian Minister had been refused permission to leave Paris by the Prussians. Communication with their Governments by foreign Ministers is required to be by open dispatches. According to a Tours dispatch the Prussians fired the Chateau of St. Cloud to conceal their depredations. The inhabitants of the town of St. Cloud say that all the valuables had disappeared before the fire broke out. Intrenched camps for the drilling of new troops are to be formed by the French, it is reported from Tours. Lyons is to be supplied with provisions for 75,000 men for two months. M. Thiers has returned to Tours.

From the papers of the 24th we learn that a report prevails in London that the Government will at once offer direct intervention for an armistice, and that the British Ambassadors at Tours and Berlin have taken the initial steps. Austria and Italy are represented to be in accord with Great Britian on this question, and a Vienna dispatch says that the Austrian Government is urgently advocating an armistice at Tours and Versailles. It is understood at Tours that the English proposals were submitted there and at Berlin on Friday last. M. Thiers, for the coming mission to Versailles, is not encouragingly spoken of by the Berlin papers. The German commander on the Loire has issued a proclamation declaring that the main condition of peace is the restitution of Alsace and Lorraine to Germany.

A demonstration was made on Saturday in Luxembourg, on the arrival of Prince Henry of Orange, designed to show that the Grand Duchy does not desire to enter into the North German Confederation. In the Lower House of the Diet of Wurtemburg an official statement was read, alluding vaguely to desired objects now within reach, involving modifications of the Constitution, which should have to be submitted to the new Diet. A decree dissolving the Diet was then read. France has been divided into millitary divisions of the North, under Gen. Bourbaki, headquarters at Lille; the West under Gen. Fiercu, head-quarters at Mans; the centre under Gen. Polhes, headquarters at Bourges, and the East, and under Ge Gambriens, head-quarters at Besanco

A sortie from Paris was made on Saturday night in which the garrison were repulsed, losing guns and prisoners. Cannonading was heard at Moutargis all day on Friday, in the direction of Paris. Chartres has been occupied by the Germans. A Tours dispatch reports a defeat of the Prussians in the front of "Hecourt." Heavy fighting is reported between Voray and Crussey, in the Vosges, in which the Prussians were repulsed.

The Poor Asylum at Woodstock, Conn., was burned on Saturday, and one of the inmates lost his life.

The damage to property, in Wisconsin, during the recent storm, is now found to have been quite considerable. Several seamen were carried overboard from schooners and other small craft, but, as far as could be ascertained, only two lives were lost.

The Oregonians have been much disappointed by the census returns, which show the population of their State to be only 90,876. A Portland exchange concludes a very mournful article upon the subject as follows: "We are sorry that, like the snowy crest of Mount Hood, it is coming down."

The shock of the earthquake was so great in Montreal that bells were rung in the public buildings, and Judges precipitately left their rooms in the Courthouse. Chimney-tops were thrown down in Quebec, and the spire of St. Paul's Church, Toronto, was seen to sway back and forth. Throughout the Dominion the shock was quite distinct.

A new form of envelope has recently become quite popular in Germany, and possesses the convenience of enabling one to open a letter when completely sealed up, without the ordinary difficulty of finding an entrance. The arrangement consists in introducing a thread, which projects from one of the corners, by nulling which the lower edge of the envelope is cut through without injury to the enclosure or address, or the stamp.

The Controller of the Currency has notified the national banks that a new contract with Adams Express Company has been made, by which, after the 1st of November, mutilated bank notes and currency, properly canceled, will be transmitted at twenty-five cents per $1,000 dollars over each express line, which is a considerable reduction from the present rate of charges.

A love letter is a heterogeneous compound of lies and nonsense. If you are really in love, you are positively unfit to write; if you are not in love you will only be puzzling your brain to invent falsehoods, which is ten times worse. Love letters are the silliest of created things and are only endurable when read aloud in a public court, to afford amusement to a gaping crowd, however they are "useful" sometimes in an action at law, to secure "damages!" "Black and white" are awk-ward witnesses, and "aids to assist the memory" anything but pleasant.

Immediately after the late election the Conservatives Executive Committee issued an address to the people of the State, in which they declared that the result "was not a party triumph," but an uprising of the honest men of all parties against fraud, corruption and dishonesty, and in favor of reform. Now certain Democratic journals claim that it was a party triumph, and nothing else, won by themselves in spite of the moderate men, whom they seem to be anxious to get rid of. The moderate men hold the balance of power in the State, to say the least of it, as the ultras will see sooner or later, if they are determined to see.—Old North State.

There are in Pike County, Penn., thousands of acres of rugged land, in which wild game abound. That sportsmen may have a hunting ground which they may call their own, a stock company has been formed to purchase land. William H. Bell, Esq of Branchville, Sussex County, N. J., is the leader in the project, and it is his intention to purchase 10,000 acres of land and procure a perpetual lease for four thousand acres more. The land is situated mostly in Blooming Grove and Dingman township. Deer and bear are already numerous there, and if properly managed and protected game will be plenty within a few years. The plot will be fenced in, and fishing lodges will add to the other sources of amusement. Already several New-Yorkers, as well as wealthy Jerseymen, have given their names to insure the success of the enterprise.

NORTH CAROLINIAN.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1870.

THIS WEEK'S ADVERTISEMENTS.

We call attention to the following new advertisements in this issue.
Agents Wanted.
Wanted Agents.
Important Notice.

Local and Personal.

☞ Nearly every Boat brings fresh arrivals from the North.

☞ Read the advertisement of Dr. J. N. BUTT in this issue.

☞ See the large advertisement of J. SALOMONSKY & Co. in this issue.

☞ The Colored Normal School has been re-opened. It is now held in their new building.

☞ Unable to carefully read the proof in our last issue we regret to find a number of typographical errors.

☞ The weather continues delightful. Many of our farmers are busy sowing their Wheat.

☞ Mr. JOS. N. BELL is with J. L. WINNER in the Photograph and Jewelry business. Give him a call.

☞ Remember the place to get good pictures is at WINNER'S Gallery over Butt's Drug Store on Road Street.

☞ His Honor Judge BROOKS is holding U. S. District Court at Newberne this week.

☞ What the young ladies of our City have on the brain—handkerchief Flirtation.

☞ The "Yankee Store" is receiving a tremendous stock of goods of every imaginable kind.

☞ J. L. WINNER has just received a large supply of all the latest styles of picture frames. Those wishing good pictures should give him a call.

☞ The Land and Lumber Company are building a railroad from their Steam Saw Mill to their Planing Mill. This will be quite an improvement.

☞ Our Merchants and Farmers complain with the D.S. S. T. Co., for the non-transportation of goods over their line. Let them put on more Steamers.

☞ Mrs. J. WESLEY SUTTON, of New Hope, sends us a sweet Potato, of the yam variety, measuring 24 inches in circumference and weighing seven pounds! It is a mammoth specimen. We learn that her whole crop is of extraordinary size.

☞ The Express—a lively Democratic paper published at Williamston—has been "pecking away" at us for some time. If it affords you any amusement, neighbor, enjoy yourself. The NORTH CAROLINIAN is good natured and disposed to be indulgent to young people.

☞ We call attention to the able article, on our first page, on the "Malarial Diseases of Eastern North Carolina." It is from the pen of a very able Physician—one who before the war had a large and successful practice in this part of our State.

☞ Nature's Hair Restorative excels everything. No dirt, no sediment, no poison! Perfectly reliable. It does the work most effectually. A treatise giving full particulars sent postage free upon application to PROCTOR BROS., Gloucester, Mass., sole agents. See advertisement.

☞ Rev. E. E. ADAMS, D. D., Lincoln University, Chester Co., Pa., says of "Our Father's House:" It is grand, gorgeous, impressive; calculated to attract and thrill the popular heart. It is a wonderful production, both for variety of thought and richness of expression. Dr. MARCH is one of the most picturesque writers in our country. See advertisement.

☞ One of "the boys" of the office, through a "local" in our last issue, expressed surprise that he should have been invited to accompany a party of young ladies on

"——a sail down the River."

Modest bashfulness will be the death of some folks; but ladies! don't give him up. Try again. He is not invulnerable. We give our consent. He will be safe in your hands.

☞ In reply to several Northern correspondents in relation to the business of Elizabeth City we would say that we have 14 Stores, 20 Groceries, 3 Millinery Stores, 2 Hotels, 3 Drug Stores, 3 Steam Saw Mills, 2 Grist Mills, 2 Watch Makers, 2 Ship Yards, 3 Butchers, 2 Livery Stables, 2 Carriage Builders, 1 Photographer. 2 Saddlers, 1 Bakery, 1 Dentist, a Bank, a Printing Office and a sufficient number of professional gentlemen—Lawyers and Doctors—to supply the needs of our people.

☞ Our amiable friend A. L. BUTT Jr., of Perquimans, sends us a sample of "Dickson Cotton," grown by himself, the product of four bolls;—weight one ounce! He informs us that, as an experiment, he weighed the cotton from 300 bolls, which after being sunned three days, weighed 4 lbs. 6 oz. From the sample sent us we see this variety of cotton has great length of staple and the fibre is of silky fineness. Let our friend continue to read the NORTH CAROLINIAN and, through its teachings, be converted to the true political faith, and he will be—happy!

☞ "Student" wants to know what "Nepenthe" means or refers to. It is the name of a plant which in torrid regions, supplies travelers with a refreshing beverage. It has an urn or pitcher at the extremity of its leaves, generally filled with pure and limpid water. This is covered with a lid when full; but the water diminishes during the day, and increases in quantity during the night. It is also the name of a plant which the ancients put into wine to drive "dul care" away, when the wine itself couldl not. Some suppose it to be the Helenium of Botanists.

☞ If you wish to see the largest and most varied stock of goods ever exhibited in Elizabeth City go to the "Yankee Store."

THANKS GIVING:—The President has appointed Thursday, the 27th of November, as a day of thanksgiving through the country.

THE SOUTH CAROLINA ELECTION:—The South Carolina Election has gone Republican. Gov. SCOTT has been re-elected.

☞ Vessels are constantly arriving loaded with goods for the "Yankee Store" Every one should go down and give them a trial.

☞ Mr. CLARK PERRY has brought us seven Sweet Potatoes weighing four and a half pounds each. He says he has a good many of the same size.

☞ The new and beautiful Sloop, just launched and named after our townsman W. A. HARNEY, made her first trip on Friday last. It is said that she is the fastest sailing craft in our harbor.

☞ The Steamship "Key West" went ashore about fifteen miles from Nag's Head on Friday morning about 4 o'clock. She was bound to Charleston for cotton. We have not learned the particulars, nor the condition of the wreck.

☞ We can assure our Clinton, Iowa, correspondent that there is no section of the Union more safe, more peaceable, quiet and orderly than Eastern North Carolina. The people are open hearted, generous, hospitable and kind. The Ku Klux outrages have never reached here. They never will. Nor will they be repeated to any extent in this State hereafter. The recent investigations have elicited "developments" carrying consternation into the Ku Klux camp, causing many of the organizations to disband and so intimidating the balance as to make them powerless for all time to come.

☞ The young people of our community who think of taking to themselves a "better half" should go to the "Yankee Store" and examine their splendid assortment of furniture.

☞ It is astonishing what exaggerated reports will get abroad respecting the sickness somewhat prevalent here during the past six weeks. We have received a number of inquiries respecting it, some asking us whether it is true that we have been "averaging five funerals a day?" We have no motive in deceiving anybody. We have not concealed the fact that during the month of September and up to the middle of October it has been sickly here—bilious and remittent fevers prevailing quite generally. But of all the cases in this City and county, in a population of twelve thousand, there has not been a single death, excepting a few cases of children, from either. The diseases have been manageable—have not been fatal. They never are in this locality. Nor has it been more sickly here than in very many sections in the North. There the fatality—the percentage of deaths—have been much greater.

☞ Something worth seeing—the large and well selected stock of Goods just received at the "Yankee Store."

Preceding the list of marriages, a Chicago paper says: "The followieg is a list of candidates for divorce."

Sixty members of an educational institute in Maine recently spelled caterpillar seventeen different ways.

A Lafayette (Ind.) exchange says that the lanes and alleys of that city are in such a sad state of filth that the Street Commissioner has to wear a clothes-pin on his nose when going his rounds.

A measure has been brought before the Legislature of Virginia, having for its object the protection of farmers and graziers from the introduction of Texas cattle into that State during certain seasons of the year.

A California exchange commences a very lengthy article on insects, as follows: "Of all the insects round here, none is so destructive and otherwise annoyin as them horse-bees Them fellers eats everything up without a buzz."

There arrived in New York during September 349 vessels from foreign ports with dutiable merchandise. The number of vessels arrived bringing passengers was 31. The total number of passengers brought was 16,936.

A confidence operator, who purchased 817,000 worth of goods at San Francisco, and shipped them East, was recently arrested and thrown into prison while endeavoring to go through the form of "involuntary ban rupcy."

A terrible hurricane has been raging on the island of Cuba within a few days. Vessels are wrecked on the coast, houses blown down and crops destroyed. At Matanzas a large district was overflowed. and it is reported that 2,000 persons have been drowned.

A number of distinguished Japanese are in San Francisco, among them the Prince Imperial, heir apparent to the throne. A powder magazine exploded near Alexandria, Egypt, on Sunday, killing and injuring fifty persons, and destroying several houses.

Gen. Sherman reports that the Indian country is in a very peaceful condition. No hostile demonstration have recently been made along the line of the railroads, and the Indians generally appear to be well disposed.

The Chinese in Carlifornia have a burying place in San Francisco, were they go twice a year to distribute food upon the graves of their deceased friends, and throw pieces of charmed papers to the winds, with a view of exorcising evil spirits. Nearly 2,5000 Celestials recently participated in a ceremony of this kind.

The Greensboro' Republican says: The business on the North Carolina railroad, which had slackened during the summer months, is now rapidly reviving, and the travel from Greensboro south, never has been so great. The amount of dried fruit sent from the North Carolina railroad depot to the 26th ult., was 126 871 lbs. From the Rirhmond and Danville depot, 433,715 lbs.

DEATHS.

SEDGWICK.—Ella, infant daughter of J. C. and Martha J. Sedgwick, died Oct. 12th., 1870, aged 4 years and 3 months.

CONSOLATION.

Little Ella, mother's darling,
O're the Border gone away,
Mother's care and mother's treasure
Sings with Angels every day.
Little Ella, gone to Jesus,
Safe within His sheltering arm,
Mother, never fear for Ella,
He will keep her from all harm.
—Ella Darling.

When you feel like calling Ella,
From beyond the Golden Shore,
Think you have a darling Angel
Living there forever more.
She will be to you a blessing,
Bow beneath the Chastening Rod,
She will be the first to meet you,
She will lead you up to God.

April 14, 1870-1yr.

Females, old and young, who have so long been troubled with some female complaint, should not despair, Let us whisper words of comfort. You can be cured. You can be snatched from the monster which has so long prostrated and paralyzed your whole system. You can regain your health, your beauty, your strength and buoyancy. Take courage, despond not, be cheerful; a remedy is at hand, prepared by experienced physicians, specially for just such diseases as afflict you; and as the profession are using and prescribing this remedy with much success, we feel proud in calling your attention to it. It comes highly recommend, and we earnestly advise all suffering females to use this great female medicine at once. We allude to the "English Female Bitters," advertised in another column. ⁂

A TORPID SYSTEM.

Sometimes, without any assignable cause, the physical strength and animal spirits give way, and a strange torpor falls alike on the body and intellect. There is little or no pain perhaps, but the natural vigor and elasticity of the nervous and muscular system seems to have departed, and an indifference to the pleasures of life, and even of its grave responsibilities, takes the place of that earnest interest in both which characterizes every well balanced mind when in a healthy condition.

This state of partial collapse is often the premonitory symptoms of some serious malady. Eradicate, unmistakeably that the vital powers are languishing and need a stimulant. In such cases the effect of a few doses of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is wonderfully beneficial. The great tonic wakes up the system from its drowse. The secretions and the circulation receive a new impetus. The relaxed nerves recover their elasticity under the operations of the specific, like the slackened strength of a musical instrument in the process of tuning. Lethargy and debility are replaced by energy and vigor, the spirits rise, and life that almost seemed a burden while the depression lasted, becomes once more enjoyable. That such a medicine as this should be produced by a remedy entirely devoid of the powerful alkaloids and mineals so extensively used in modern practice, may seem incredible to those who pin their faith on the medicinal efficacy of active poisons, but if those skeptics will take the trouble to enquire of those who have tested the corrective and alterative virtues of the Bitters under the circumstances described, they will find the statement to be true. ⁂

MEDICAL.

SICKNESS, PAIN AND DEATH.

Legitimately results as penalties for violations of natural laws, from which none escape.

The faded cheek, the pale and wan features, the dull eye, the clouded intellect, the sleep heaving sigh, the feeble and emaciated frame, the dejected brow, the tottering gate, all indicate previous transgression of law. Knowing that "procrastination is the thief of time," all intelligent beings apply for some remedy as soon as circumstances permit; while those who do not act upon the principle that "delays are dangerous," generally linger, lose more time and pay more money.

Thousands of mothers and daughters, in all stations and conditions of life, are suffering, lingering and dying from the effects of some dreaded and dreadful

FEMALE COMPLAINT,

That claims its victims throughout the length and breadth of our land.

Many females suffer in some way at each monthly period; some girls are in great peril at the commencement of menstruation, while older ones dread its decline at the "turn of life." Sometimes the menstrual flow is too much, or too little, or may be attended with pain; may be irregular or entirely checked, or changed in appearance, attended with other distressing symptoms. Leucorrhœa, or the "Whites," frequently drains the system, or ulceration of the womb may create pain and cause rapid prostration.

Falling of the womb is an exceedingly common complaint, giving much trouble and distress, which, under ordinary treatment, is difficult to cure.

Hysteria, Green Sickness, Irritability of the Womb, and other serious and fatal complaints follow the female sex throughout life. Lives there a medical gentleman who has or can relieve the fair sex of the above troubles? Not many. Is there no combination remedial agents that will come to her rescue? We answer, Yes.

ENGLISH FEMALE BITTERS,

The only acknowledged Uterine Tonic and Female Regulator known, will cure all complaints above mentioned in an incredibly short time. The Bitters at once arouses, strengthens and restores the womb to its natural condition, removing obstructions, relieving pain and regulating the monthly period. Yonder stands a pale, feeble and languid girl, just bursting into womanhood; she is the pride of all, but hark! she silently steals a pickle, eats chalk, or a slate pencil; no appetite for food; she turns with a dull eye and seeks solitude; her eye no longer sparkles; her merry laugh is no longer heard ringing through the air; she mopes about with bloodless lips and gums, with headache, palpitation, constipation, swimming of the head, cold feet and hands, melancholy; she has a coated tongue, offensive breath, and a host of other evils too numerous to mention.

When neglected all these symptoms become aggravated, there is sick stomach, heartburn, a dark line settles under the eyes, the legs and ankles are swollen, the hair loses its gloss and falls off, there is brittleness and splitting of the finger-nails, swollen abdemen, extreme nervousness, fretfulness, pains and aches, dry cough, Hysterical Fits, rapid prostration, epilepsy and death! If you, or any of your friends, are thus adllicted, send at once for a Bottle of English Female Bitters and be cured. Its effects are magical in such complaints. Surely no mother will postpone and delay this duty until

DEATH IS AT THE DOOR.

In all these complaints the system evidently shows a want of red blood, and Mr. Churchill, in his work on Diseases of Females, says: "Bearing in mind that the blood is remarkably deficient in red corpuscles, and the known property of iron to correct this condition, theory suggests it as the most to be relied on, the best of which is the Citrate." Citrate of Iron entered largely into the composition of English Female Bitters, combined with powerful vegetable tonics of rare qualities.

Among the mountains of Tennessee and the piney woods of Mississippi, is found a certain hard and flinty root, which has been in secret use by some old midwives for many years, possessing magic powers in regulating and restoring all females suffering with any affection of the womb. This root we have obtained, gave it a fair test in our practice and it is now one of the principle ingredients in these Bitters. Other powerful uterine and general tonics also enter into its composition. We also add Leptandra or Black root, sufficient to act npon the liver and keep the bowels open.

BLOOMING YOUNG GIRLS,

Middle-aged matrons, those at the critical period, and the aged grandmother, are all cured by the use of our English Female Bitters, now prescribed and used by physicians all over the country.

If you are troubled with Falling of the Womb, attended with a sense of weight and bearing down pain in the back and side, and other attendant evils, English Female Bitters will give entire relief.

Those at the "turn of life," mothers after confinement, and all others (male or female) who are convalescents from any protracted or debilitating complaint, who gain strength slowly, and whose digestion is slow and imperfect

AGRICULTURAL, HORTICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC MATTERS.

Eggs.

BY HENRY WARD BEECHER.

I never come upon a nest of eggs, secreted by the hen most conscientiously, and unknown to the most searching housekeeper, without a sense of boyish delight, which would bring down on me reproving looks and grave admonition from all who have an awful sense of the proper dignity of ministers. The discovery of hidden eggs was always an excitement, and there have been times when the excitement was prolonged and extreme. It chanced in this wise, and in the goodly State of Indiana.

An old-fashioned barn there was, huge in the middle, with a variety of sheds, stables and carriage-houses, projecting on every side of it, as if the barn had settled a family of little barns all around it.

And so, one mellow autumn day, we wandered through the garden, and strolled into the barn. It was festooned with cobwebs, and had all the tribes of spiders that hide in half lights. We climbed the beams, we jumped down from far up on the hay, and finally, after sundry amusements, lay down by the side where the shrunk boards gave us an inspection-crack, from which we swept the neighborhood—saw and were unseen. Soon we heard the least possible sound of a foot on the hay. Turning our head, we beheld the productive but unprofitable hen stealing toward her secret nest. It was the one time too often. We knew as much as she did.

Is there not a providence for hens? Is there not a fate that follows the most obscure and unwatched violence!

We put the eggs safely in our coat-tail pocket, and walked cautiously. Dinner was spread as we came in. Some question came up which diverted our thought from the discovery of the nest—indeed we forgot that we had eggs about us, and drew to the table and sat down with an alacrity which was only equalled by the spring with which we got up.

"Gracious!"

"Why, what is the matter?"

"Matter enough!"

"Are you sick? Do let—

I drew my hand from my pocket—the secret was out! That woman was a saint! My pockets were duly cleansed, without one cutting word. I can imagine the process, but I never like to dwell upon it. Would you believe it, the same thing happened in a few weeks again? It did, and to the very same person! But never since then, no—never! From that day to this we do not remember ever to have even taken an egg from a nest.

1. When I see a man who allows himself to be puffed up and flattered, I know that his time will come when he will sit down on his eggs.

2. When I see men who are robbing, right and left, and filling their pockets with unlawful wealth which other men earned, I say, "You will sit down on those eggs yet."

3. When over-cunning men think that they can outwit all their fellows, and are exulting at the success which their shrewdness has achieved, I say to myself, "Fill your pockets! By and by you will sit down on those eggs."—New York Ledger.

Sunny Rooms.

Every woman is wise enough and careful enough to secure for her house-plants every bit of available sunshine during the cold winter months. Great care is taken to get southern exposure for them. Indeed, if one can secure no other than a north window for her plants, she has too much love for those unconscious, animate things to keep them at all. She would rather leave them out in the cold to die outright, than lingur out a martyr existence in the shade.

Folks need sunshine quite as much as plants do. Men and women who have a fair degree of strength and the use of their legs, can get out into the world and get a glimpse of the sunshine now and then, and if they choose to do so, let them live in rooms with only a northern exposure; but if it is possible, let us secure rooms into which every ray of sunshine that in winter may enter for the little babies who are shut up in the house, invalids who cannot leave their rooms, and aged people who are too infirm to get out doors. Let us reflect for a moment that these classes of persons, if kept in rooms with only north windows, will suffer just as much from the absence of sunshine, as green, growing plants would do in the same rooms, and their suffering is of account in proportion as a human being is better than a geranium or a fuchsia. Everybody knows how a bright, sunny day in winter gladdens every one who is situated so as to enjoy it. Let us make some sacrifices, if need be, in order to give the feeble ones their measure of sunshine. —Laws of Life.

Animals Love Man.

It is perfectly natural that man should have unfriendly feelings towards wild beasts, and that the instinct of self-preservation should lead him to destroy them. But it is shocking that useful and domestic animals should tremble and fly at his approach, or that they should suffer and perish through his cruelty. We believe, with the bishop of Chalons, that "it is a crime, and a sign of a wicked heart, to take pleasure in tormenting animals, and making them suffer. It is, indeed, unchristian."

Almost all domestic animals are naturally affectionate; they love man, become attached to him, and show their feelings in ways which are often intelligent. If, instead of training animals by cruelty and abuse, man would treat them kindly and affectionately, he would be like the monarchs of the golden age, the king of nature, adored by his subjects.—From the French of A de Beadpre.

Here is the horse's petition to his driver:

Up the hill, whip me not;
Down the hill, hurry me not;
In the stable, forget me not;
Of hay and corn rob me not;
With sponge and brush, neglect me not;
Of soft, dry bed, deprive me not;
If sick or cold, chill me not;
With bit or reins, jerk me not;
And when you are angry, strike me not.

SALTING COWS.—A writer in the Rural New Yorker says that cows should be salted every morning, and if in the stable, before foddering, but never after taking water. This is the practice of the best stock keepers in Switzerland, and he thinks much preferable to salting them once or twice a week, or to keeping it constantly within their reach.

An old stable-keeper in England says he has never, had a bad foot on his horse since he commenced the practice of bedding on a thick layer of sawdust. Pine sawdust he finds the best, oak the worst.

The earlier the breakfast the more work will be done during the day, and the better will be the health of the household.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WESTMORELAND.

The undersigned gives notice, that the Westmoreland Plantation, on which he now resides, is for sale.

Westmoreland, is in Pasquotank county, 12 miles from Elizabeth City, near Newbegun Creek. It contains about 825 acres; of which about 125 acres are in wood, conveniently located. The woodland is abundant to supply the Plantation, and there is a lot of Cypress, which will afford building material, for the place for all time to come. The land lies nearly in a square, and is surrounded by four good public roads, which intersect each other, at right angles. There are about 700 acres in cultivation; it is in a high state of improvement, well drained, and produces heavy crops. The whole Plantation, is enclosed with a Juniper and Cypress rail fence, of the best quality, and will require but little repairs, for many years. There are three fields fenced off, each connecting with the Barn Lot, one of 100 acres, one of 60 acres, and one of 50 acres, convenient for small grain, clover or pasturage. The lands produce Corn, Cotton, Wheat, Oats and Peas, in great abundance, and grows Clover, and the grases most luxurtantly. It is well adapted to all sorts of garden vegetables. There is an abundant supply of fruit for the use of a large family, consisting of the finest Standard Pears, bearing abundantly, from the 15th of July to the 15th of October. Peaches, Cherries, Plums and a lot of dwarf Pears, Peaches, Apricots, Apples and Cherries, set out last fall. A fine lot of Raspberry bushes, from which, there are picked daily, during the season, from 2 to 4 Gallons of berries. A large and thrifty Scuppernong Grape Vine, and Isabella grape vines, bearing luxuriantly, and a fine lot of fig bushes, in full bearing. The buildings are located in a large and beautiful grove of forest trees. The lot is high and pleasant. The main Dwelling House, is a large and elegant building, with 6 rooms, 5 of them with fire places, a large Hall, 12 feet wide, a large pantry and a verandah, on both the North and South sides of the house, all perfectly and elegantly finished. Attached to the main building is a wing 25x30 feet, two stories high, well finished. This building can, very well be used for a separate family. There are two kitchens or cook-houses, two smoke houses, two poultry houses, dairies, and indeed every out-building required for a large family, and sufficient for the accommodation of two or three families.

The farm buildings comprise four tenant houses, each 2 rooms, 3 small barns for tenants use, tool-house, blacksmith shop, a barn, now used for a Gin House 20x32 feet; a large barn 42x72 feet; and a stock house two stories high, 30x50 feet, the upper story used as a hay loft, with a shed on each side.

There are two wells of water, which are said to be among the best in the country. The barn is ¼ of a mile from the creek, where all the produce is delivered, on vessels. There are four roads leading from the lot to the four main roads, one running North, one East, one South and one West, and each about ½ of a mile to the main road. Westmoreland has long been acknowledged as one of, if indeed it is not the most valuable plantation, in the county, or in Eastern North Carolina.

Persons wishing to purchase, are invited to come and examine the property, every effort will be made to enable visitors to form a correct opinion. There have been 6 or 8 farms, adjacent to this one, sold to Northern men, within a year past.

My price is $30 per acre. I refer to Dr. P. John; Hon. G. W. Brooks; T. D. Pendleton, Esq., R. F. Overman, Cashr., and Col. W. F. Martin, of Elizabeth City, N. C.

TO PHYSICIANS

New York, May 5th, 1870.

Allow me to call your attention to my

PREPARATION OF COMPOUND EXTRACT BUCHU.

The component parts are, BUCHU, LONG LEAF, CUBEBS, JUNIPER BERRIES.

MODE OF PREPARATION.—Buchu, in vacuo. Juniper Berries, by distillation, to form a fine gin. Cubebs extracted by displacement with spirits obtained from Juniper Berries; very little sugar is used, and a small proportion of spirit. It is more palatable than any now in use.

Buchu, as prepared by Druggists, is of a dark color. It is a plant that emits its fragrance; the action of a flame destroys this (its active principle), leaving a dark and glutinous decoction. Mine is the color of the ingredients. The Buchu in my preparation predominates; the smallest quantity of the other ingredients are added, to prevent fermentation; upon inspection, it will be found not to be a Tincture, as made in Pharmacopœa, nor is it a Syrup—and therefore can be used in cases where fever or inflamation exist. In this, you have the knowledge of the ingredients and the mode of preparation.

Hoping that you will favor it with a trial, and that upon inspection it will meet with your approbation,

With a feeling of confidence,
I am, very respectfully,
H. T. HELMBOLD,
Chemist and Druggist, of 16 Years' Experience.

(FROM THE LARGEST MANUFACTURING CHEMISTS IN THE WORLD.)

NOVEMBER 4, 1854.

"I am acquainted with Mr. H. T. HELMBOLD; he occupied the Drug Store opposite my residence, and was successful in conducting the business where others had not been equally so before him. I have been favorably impressed with his character and enterprise."

WILLIAM WEIGHTMAN,
Firm of Powers & Weightman,
Manufacturing Chemists,
Ninth and Brown streets, Philadelphia.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU,

Is the great specific for Universal Lassitude, Prostration, &c.

The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of Medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. If no treatment is submitted to, Consumption or insanity ensues.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT OF BUCHU.

In affections peculiar to Females, is unequalled by any other preparation, as in Chlorosis, or Retention, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrus State of the Uterus, and all complaints incident to the sex, or the decline or change of life.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH

Will radically exterminate from the system diseases arising from habits of dissipation, at little expense, little or no change in diet, no inconvenience or exposure; completely superceding those unpleasant and dangerous remedies, Copaiva and Mercury, in all these diseases.

USE HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU.

In all diseases of these organs, whether existing in male or female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing. It is pleasant in taste and odor, "immediate" in action, and more strengthening than any of the preparations of Bark or Iron.

Those suffering from broken-down or delicate constitutions, procure the remedy at once.

The reader must be aware that, however slight may be the attack of the above diseases, it is certain to affect the bodily health and mental powers.

All the above diseases require the aid of a Diuretic. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU is the great Diuretic.

Sold by Druggists everywhere. PRICE—$1.25 per bottle, or 6 bottles for $6.50. Delivered to any address. Describe symptoms in all communications.

The Great Medical Discovery!
Dr. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
VINEGAR BITTERS,

Hundreds of Thousands
Bear testimony to their wonderful Curative Effects.

WHAT ARE THEY?

THEY ARE NOT A VILE

FANCY DRINK,

Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced, and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics" "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter, and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters, according to directions, and remain long unwell.

$100 will be given for an incurable case, provided the bones are not destroyed by mineral poisons or other means, and the vital organs cannot be reached by the point of repair.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, and Gout, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They invigorate the stomach, and stimulate the torpid liver and bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Copious Discharges of Urine, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms which are the offsprings of Dyspepsia, are cured by these Bitters.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

PIN, TAPE, and other WORMS, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed.

For full directions, read carefully the circular around each bottle, printed in four languages—English, German, French, and Spanish.
